

Overview

IT & eCommerce Law in India

Information Technology has proven an enabler of human endeavour and enterprise; to garner and grow the IT industry requires not only favourable commercial conditions, but also appreciation of its often intangible product.

LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR IT AND E-COMMERCE IN INDIA

For a dynamic, innovative and progressive IT industry to thrive as a goods and services producer and to be an effective enabler for electronic transactions, a stable, predictable and normative legal regime is required. Agreements and contracts must adequately define and balance rights and information, version and control restrictions, and policies governing their sharing and use too must be robust while avoiding being unfair.

Expertise in managing assets, carrying-out due diligence and valuation, assessing responsibility and liability under the Information Technology Act, 2000 and place of residence laws, delivery of goods, specific performance, rescission and repudiation is quintessential in virtually all commercial settings today.
